The ILRC Pushes Forward After a Disappointing Setback

The U.S. Supreme Court’s unfavorable split decision in the United States v. Texas case fails to protect the civil rights of immigrants across our nation. Under this ruling, the expansion of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) and Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA) programs will remain on hold. Expanded DACA and DAPA would have been a monumental step toward a more just immigration system, safeguarding more than 5 million immigrants and their families.

"The impact of the ruling is not to be understated; the lack of any meaningful administrative or legislative mechanism to address the many challenges of the U.S. immigration system threatens to continue to separate countless families, including those with U.S. citizen children. Nevertheless, the ILRC remains committed to working alongside the immigrant community to fight against policies that target undocumented immigrants and facilitate the separation of families, and to fight for an overhaul of our broken immigration system," said Sally Kinoshita, Deputy Director, Immigrant Legal Resource Center (ILRC).

Rhetoric demonizing immigrants has grown prolific in the furor of the presidential campaign, increasing the danger of unjust immigration enforcement and policies that undermine the safety of immigrant families and communities. In light of federal inaction, the ILRC’s work is even more critical than ever to protect the rights of immigrants.

What is ILRC doing in the absence of expanded DACA and DAPA?

Pushing for Fair and Just Immigration Reform

ILRC’s policy and advocacy work continues to focus on an inclusive legalization program and prosecutorial discretion options at the federal level. At the state level, we are promoting legislation to reduce detention and deportation (see page 2 for more details). We have had remarkable successes in California, including the recently passed Immigrants Shape California Legislative Package (a series of measures seeking to protect the most vulnerable immigrant groups in the state). With California emerging as the nation’s recognized leader in immigration reform, the ILRC seeks to replicate those wins for the rest of the nation.

Exploring Other Forms of Immigration Remedies through Ready California

We are finding ways to assist immigrants in pursuing existing immigration remedies including the original DACA program—which is more critical than ever. Through a statewide coalition led by the ILRC, Ready California, we will provide free, day-long trainings to our partners and their allies within the next few months. These trainings are specifically for nonprofit organizations as well as their committed volunteer attorneys.

Fighting Against Unfair Immigration Enforcement

ILRC has been a leader in the fight against cruel and unjust deportation programs that have victimized immigrant communities. We will continue to build the capacity of the field to engage in deportation defense, including pursuing immigration protections for the detained population and providing advocates with intensive deportation defense skills trainings. ILRC was instrumental in putting an end to the infamous Secure Communities (S-Comm) program which led to record deportations and countless family separations. Although President Obama’s executive action in 2014 terminated S-Comm, the Priority Enforcement Program (PEP) took its place—unfortunately operating in much the same way. ILRC is pushing for a complete separation between immigration authorities and local law enforcement to safeguard immigrants. Today, there are more than 350 policies nationwide separating Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and local law enforcement.

The ILRC Pushes Forward After a Disappointing Setback

What can immigrants do?

Know Your Rights
Immigrants can stand up against illegal ICE enforcement. ILRC has been producing and distributing Red Cards to educate and encourage undocumented immigrants to exercise their constitutional rights against ICE raids. Since 2007, we have distributed 918,849 Red Cards to the community.

Protect Yourself
Immigrants can avoid fraud by seeking qualified, legitimate immigration service providers. The ILRC works to strengthen sanctions and to help prosecute unscrupulous individuals taking advantage of immigrants. We distribute comic books and flyers educating the community on the dangers of immigration fraud.

Engage in the Democratic Process
The ILRC urges immigrants, who are able to do so, to engage in the democratic process by voting in support of issues that are important to them. Greater civic participation serves to guarantee a richer, more inclusive future for all Americans. The ILRC is leading the New Americans Campaign across the nation to assist an estimated 8.8 million eligible lawful permanent residents in becoming U.S. citizens.

The Supreme Court’s decision is an unfortunate setback, but the tireless advocacy and organizing of immigrant communities continues. ILRC remains committed to fighting for fair and just immigration reform.

2016 Legislative Updates in California

On the heels of successful passage of last year’s Immigrants Shape California Legislative Package, the ILRC is supporting key legislation to keep immigrants and their families together. As anti-immigrant vitriol saturates headlines amidst the presidential campaign, California continues to position itself as the nation’s leader in progressive and fair reform. The ILRC and its allies are collaborating to lead California in the right direction for immigration reform.

SB 1289 Dignity Not Detention Act (Senator Ricardo Lara)
As many reports have documented, substandard levels of care and ongoing human rights abuses are rampant in immigration detention centers across the nation. Over half of all immigration detention beds in facilities in the U.S. are owned by private corporations, the two largest of which make billions of dollars in annual revenue. Cosponsored by the ILRC and Community Initiatives for Visiting Immigrants in Confinement (CIVIC), this bill would prohibit private, for-profit companies from operating immigration detention facilities in California; require all other detention facilities to uphold basic standards of care; and provide the ability to sue if treatment violates the standards.

Status: Passed through Senate. Currently moving through Assembly.

AB 2792 California’s TRUTH Act (Assemblymember Rob Bonta)
As the federal government continues to encourage the involvement of local law enforcement in deportations, immigrant communities are left to deal with the consequences including, but not limited to, prolonged detention and permanent family separation. This bill would provide transparency of the operations of Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) across the state and improve accountability through community input prior to a law enforcement agency entering into an agreement with ICE.

Status: Passed through Assembly. Currently moving through Senate.

SB 1242 Post-Conviction Relief (Senator Ricardo Lara)
In 2014, through the passage of SB 1310, California lowered the maximum sentence of a misdemeanor to 364 days to reduce the excessive penalties one is confronted within the context of immigration law. Due to a minor technicality in immigration law, the misalignment in misdemeanor sentencing has resulted in thousands of legal residents at risk of losing their green cards and being unnecessarily deported. This bill (cosponsored by the Los Angeles District Attorney’s Office) takes that legislative fix a step further by making this change retroactive, ensuring that those with older convictions no longer remain at risk of unjust deportation.

Status: Passed through Senate. Currently moving through Assembly.

AB 813 A Fair Day In Court For All (Assemblymember Lorena Gonzalez)
Immigrants who previously received a legally invalid conviction have limited means to challenge it in court after they have been released, leaving them at imminent risk of deportation. This bill would provide a means to challenge these convictions in court, potentially sparing many immigrants from being unjustly deported.

Status: Passed through Assembly. Currently moving through Senate.
Building the Field through the Attorney of the Day (AOD) Program

Most immigrants face removal proceedings without an attorney or authorized representative, and the outcomes with and without a representative are grossly disparate. Sadly, the single most important factor in determining whether someone will win or lose a case is if they have an attorney present in their court proceedings. The ILRC is dedicated to providing the necessary technical legal assistance to the nonprofit community and legal advocates in order to increase their capacity to serve, which provides more immigrants a fair chance at a positive outcome in their immigration cases.

The ILRC was founded in response to the lack of adequate training and staffing needed to grapple with the increasingly complex legal and social challenges faced by community-based organizations serving immigrants. Through our various trainings, collaborations, and manuals, we offer resources to help build the capacity of organizations to contend with the various ways immigration law impacts their communities. At the heart of our long-standing work is ILRC’s Attorney of the Day (AOD) program.

Through the AOD program the ILRC provides technical legal assistance to nonprofit service providers and legal representatives serving immigrants. We advise public defenders working with immigrants about the immigration consequences of potential convictions. ILRC attorneys consult on specific cases, from reviewing evidentiary documents and conducting research to helping providers represent immigrants. Our consultations include a wide variety of matters related to immigration law and practice including family-based immigration; removal defense; the intersection between criminal and immigration law; citizenship matters; humanitarian benefits such as asylum and withholding of removal; options for victims of crimes and domestic abuse; relief for minors; and much more.

After 37 years, the ILRC now supports over 70 agencies in the Bay Area through our Attorney of the Day program and 50 other agencies and public defenders throughout the state of California. Nationally, we support more than 100 organizations through the New Americans Campaign, an innovative campaign helping legal permanent residents obtain citizenship. The groups who use the AOD service—and in turn the clients that they serve—include direct service organizations, immigrant-based organizations, coalitions, government staff, English as a Second Language and civics teachers, and pro bono attorneys.

On the immediate horizon, the ILRC’s Attorney of the Day program must meet the need for support for immigration court cases as enforcement efforts continue to escalate. We’re also readying ourselves for the imminent I-601A process, which will allow...

ILRC Staff Attorney Erin Quinn

I was in high school in the Central Valley at a time when Pete Wilson was Governor, and Prop 187 threatened to deny public benefits and education to undocumented immigrants. Fortunately, my own family offered a counterbalance to this exclusionary policy. My parents, aunts, and uncles argued against such racist policies at parent-teacher meetings and school board meetings, modeling what it means to speak out against injustice. From an early age, I was aware that I held values that did not align with many classmates, but I never shied away from advocating for my point of view. Most importantly, my family instilled in me that I had a responsibility to engage in dialogue.

The ILRC’s multi-faceted approach to empowering immigrants aligns with my notion of what it means to be a lawyer. My interest in advocacy stems from a deep-seated belief in social justice, and that the issues we see today tug at the heart of what it means to be human and to stand up for the rights of all people.

Immigration is a human rights issue. A race issue. A justice issue.

The patchwork nature of our immigration laws make them generally inaccessible to the people they impact. Many people don’t realize that the process of deportation does not honor the rights and dignity of those that are subject to it. No one automatically gets a lawyer in immigration court, and most people face the prosecution without a lawyer on their side. Unfortunately, data shows that the single most important factor in determining whether someone will win or lose their case is whether or not they have an attorney. The deck is stacked against the majority of immigrants entangled in this system.

I’m excited to be at the ILRC where I can help immigration advocates represent immigrants more effectively. I work each day to make immigration law accessible to the immigrant community, and equip advocates with arguments in their cases to fight for immigrants on their journey to secure basic rights for their families. One thing is clear: We must raise our voices and contribute to justice in every way we can. Coupled with advocacy, organizing, and recognizing the complex nature of the issues, we can chip away at injustice.
New Americans Campaign Celebrates Fifth Anniversary with New Site

On July 1st, the New Americans Campaign celebrated its fifth anniversary with the launch of its newest site, Atlanta. Leading nonprofits in Atlanta formally launched an innovative partnership to provide naturalization services for the city’s nearly 85,000 citizenship-eligible lawful permanent residents (LPRs).

The Latin American Association, Asian Americans Advancing Justice – Atlanta, Catholic Charities of Atlanta, Center for Pan Asian Community Services, Georgia Association of Latino Elected Officials, the International Rescue Committee, and New American Pathways will join the New Americans Campaign as its 17th site.

These seven organizations, as well as collaborators from the City of Atlanta, Coalition for the People’s Agenda, and the League of Women Voters of Georgia, join the growing list of over 100 New Americans Campaign partners across the country that promote naturalization for the nearly 9 million lawful permanent residents who are eligible for citizenship in the United States.

Since its inception in July 2011, the New Americans Campaign sites and affiliated collaborations have completed more than 211,000 naturalization applications for LPRs through more than 3,400 naturalization workshops and clinics nationwide.

“Naturalization is beneficial for individuals, families, and whole communities,” says Eric Cohen, Executive Director of the Immigrant Legal Resource Center, which leads the New Americans Campaign. “We’re excited to have Atlanta join the New Americans Campaign and to bring more legal services and naturalization support to the approximately 85,000 citizenship-eligible lawful permanent residents that call the Atlanta area home.”

About the New Americans Campaign

The New Americans Campaign, led by the Immigrant Legal Resource Center, is a nonpartisan, innovative, and unprecedented effort that brings together a coalition of funders, leading national immigration and service organizations, and over one hundred local service providers across 17 different cities to help aspiring Americans reach their dream of citizenship. To learn more about the New Americans Campaign, please visit www.newamericanscampaign.org and follow the conversation at @NewAmericans.
Collaborative Resources for Immigrant Services on the Peninsula (CRISP) Celebrates a Decade of Community Service

The ILRC has been a proud member of Collaborative Resources for Immigrant Services on the Peninsula (CRISP) for 10 years. In support of immigrant communities, CRISP provides free or low-cost immigration legal assistance and engages in related policy and advocacy efforts. The Collaborative assists some of the San Francisco Peninsula’s most underserved residents including immigrant children, families, and the elderly.

CRISP offers resources and services that are culturally and linguistically sensitive to meet the needs of immigrants living throughout the Peninsula, a region that includes San Mateo and Santa Clara Counties and has a high density of immigrants. The Collaborative uses a unique model in which expertise is exchanged amongst partners through resources and referrals. Immigration law is complex—particularly for victims of violence and for immigrant children. Thanks to this model, CRISP is equipped with the necessary tools to assist families in need of immigration legal assistance. Over the last ten years, CRISP partners have exponentially increased their capacity to serve the community and elevated their baseline expertise in immigration law.

CRISP partners work together to create a system in which resources are easily shared, increasing positive outcomes for immigrant clients and building the expertise of the field. The ILRC provides technical legal expertise and serves as the fiscal agent for the Collaborative. The legal services provided by CRISP are critical for the region’s social and economic stability and vastly improve the lives of immigrant families.

The ILRC extends our appreciation to the Grove Foundation, Hurlbut-Johnson Charitable Trusts, and the Silicon Valley Community Foundation for their support of CRISP.

The following are success stories from CRISP clients. The names and identifying details have been changed to protect the privacy of individuals.

Caroline, age 16, contacted a CRISP partner for help. Her father, who had been violent against her mother, had left the United States and not contacted or supported her family since Caroline was four years old. Because of Caroline’s situation, the CRISP partner was able to assist her in applying for a green card by filing for a Special Immigration Juvenile Status (SIJS) petition. Caroline was thrilled to learn that with her green card, she could apply for federal loans so she could pursue her dream of attending college and a career in law enforcement.

At the age of two, Daniel was left in the care of an aunt in Guatemala while his parents came to the United States in pursuit of better employment opportunities. Unbeknownst to his parents, Daniel’s aunt denied him food and “shared” him with her sisters—making him clean and cook instead of allowing him to attend school. He would often miss weeks (and at times months) of school because of his aunt’s abuse. Finally, at the age of 11, Daniel reunited with his parents. Daniel’s parents found a CRISP partner to help him apply for asylum. After years of abuse and separation from his parents, Daniel was finally granted asylum in 2015 and able to start middle school in the U.S. Thanks to CRISP, Daniel can remain with his family in the U.S. indefinitely and access much-needed medical and mental healthcare. Daniel’s ambition is “to study a lot and be a policeman in the future.”

Profits over care make case for immigration reform

BY GRISEL RUIZ AND CHRISTINA FIALHO

Hillary Clinton won the California primary last week, and if she takes the White House in November, we hope she will take a cue from California.

This month, the California Senate passed the Dignity Not Detention Act (SB 1289), authored by Senator Ricardo Lara, and co-sponsored by the Immigrant Legal Resource Center and Community Initiatives for Visiting Immigrants in Confinement (CIVIC). This is the first bill in the nation to prohibit municipalities from contracting with for-profit immigration detention facilities, to require all other detention facilities in California to uphold national humane treatment standards, and to allow people to sue if their rights are violated under these basic standards.

The systemic issues calling for action could not be more pronounced. While an election year marks the potential for change, multi-billion dollar prison companies such as GEO Group and CCA have lobbied to ensure that immigration detention remains deeply entrenched in California and nationwide. Many do not know that immigration detention – the civil incarceration of immigrants, including refugees and green card holders, in deportation proceedings – affects thousands in our own backyard.

California imprisons more immigrants than any other state, except for Texas, holding approximately five thousand people in 10 detention facilities. The vast majority of individuals are locked up in prisons run by corporations with a legal duty to maximize profits for its shareholders. It is, therefore, unsurprising and disturbing that 23 individuals have reportedly died in California detention facilities since 2003. Most recently, in May, a Russian immigrant died at the Otay Detention Facility, a privately-run CCA-facility in San Diego.

As billion dollar corporations such as GEO Group and CCA make profits hand over fist, it is immigrant communities who pay the price. Nearly a quarter of U.S. children who have been placed in foster care after their parents were detained or deported are from California. Family income has been shown to drop an average of 70 percent following the incarceration of a parent, and spouses and partners of detained people often suffer from depression. Given that California is the most immigrant-rich state in the nation, these are costs that California cannot afford to bear, and certainly not to augment the profits of billion dollar companies.

The Dignity Not Detention Act states boldly that the State of California will not stand idly by as private prison corporations make billions off of the mistreatment of some of the most vulnerable in our state. Gerardo Corrales, a 19-year-old from Seaide, California, was detained at the Adelanto Detention Facility, one of the largest immigration detention facilities in the country run by GEO Group. Corrales is a paraplegic and uses a wheelchair, and GEO Group forced Corrales to reuse catheter bags. This led to a serious urinary tract infection, which ultimately required Corrales to be admitted to an outside hospital. GEO Group’s cost-cutting and risky practices have no place in California.

The Dignity Not Detention Act also ensures accountability for California’s county and city jails that contract with U.S. Immigration & Customs Enforcement (ICE). Felix Alvarado, a 53-year-old man from Honduras, was beaten and humiliated at Theo Lacy Facility, an Orange County jail that contracts with ICE. On one occasion, Orange County jail officers handcuffed Alvarado and repeatedly slammed his head against a prison wall. On another occasion, offers forcibly removed him from the shower and paraded him naked back to his cell, where he was forced to remain unclothed and covered in soap for 15-minutes, according to a federal administrative complaint filed by CIVIC last December.

If the Dignity Not Detention Act becomes law, people like Corrales and Alvarado will have a right of action to sue the government for violations of the federal Performance Based National Detention Standards, which currently offer no substantive protection to people in detention and operate only as unenforceable guidelines for federal contractors.

We hope that if elected President, Clinton will make good on her promise to “end private prisons and private detention centers” – an action which urgently needs adoption in both the civil and criminal contexts. For now, let’s ensure California continues to lead the way toward a more humane country by choosing dignity over detention.

more families to become permanent residents. The ILRC seeks to foster a society where quality legal services are available to all newcomers and where our governmental agencies operate with efficacy, respect, and fairness toward those they intend to serve. The AOD program promotes ILRC’s mission so immigrants can obtain legal and permanent immigration status, work authorization, and increased economic self-sufficiency.

Testimonials from Our Clients

“I consider the consulting agreement with the ILRC as one of the best resources available for attorneys and their clients. I have no idea how we managed without it! Thanks so much.”

Vic Eriksen, Deputy Public Defender, San Diego, CA

“The ILRC is a godsend; what a great resource. Being able to consult the AOD literally allows me to sleep better at night. I cannot thank you enough!”

Anna Teruel, Deputy Public Defender, Martinez, CA

“With the help of Attorney of the Day, I am able to take on immigration cases with more complex issues. With ILRC’s help responding to a continuance from U.S.C.I.S., Francis became a naturalized U.S. citizen this month!”

Madeline Feldon, Immigration Attorney & Program Director
International Institute of the Bay Area

“Thanks to the technical legal support of the AOD at ILRC, I was able to complete my first 601A waiver for unlawful presence, which my client needed in order to legally immigrate to the United States. This also helped save my low-income clients a lot of money. This waiver provides an opportunity for a gay, married couple to stay together with the security of permanent status. The United States citizen husband struggles with cancer and relies on his husband, who is a recipient of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, to care for him. The ILRC helped review the waiver I prepared and offered suggestions to make it stronger before we submitted it to the government. The 601A waiver was approved and my client has an appointment in Ciudad Juarez for his legal permanent residency. My client and I appreciate their assistance greatly.”

Kathy Differding, BIA Accredited Representative Program Director, California Human Development

“Our organization could not function without the expert advice we receive from ILRC’s consultation services. Whenever we are stymied, stumped or confused, we shoot off an e-mail to the expert attorneys at ILRC, and our peace of mind returns.”

Susan Bowyer, Deputy Director & Directing Attorney Immigration Center for Women and Children

2016 Phillip Burton Immigration & Civil Rights Awards

On May 19, 2016, ILRC celebrated at the 2016 Phillip Burton Awards in San Francisco. Each year, ILRC honors individuals who have contributed significantly to the advancement of immigrant rights. More than 340 guests joined us to recognize individuals who have made a tremendous impact on the immigrant community. Congratulations to this year’s honorees!

The Honorable Kevin de León
President pro Tempore of the California State Senate
Recipient of the 2016 Nancy Pelosi Policy Award

In recognition of his exemplary efforts to champion the rights of immigrants, Senator Kevin de León was presented with the 2016 Nancy Pelosi Policy Award. Senator de León has been a dedicated partner in the fight for fair and just immigration reform for many years. In 2015, the ILRC worked closely with Senator de León on the Immigrants Shape California Legislative Package, a series of 10 measures aimed at protecting the most vulnerable and marginalized members of our community.

“I’m looking at] each and every one of you: the incredible advocates, incredible activists, and incredible lawyers who work in the trenches every single day doing everything possible to make sure we can improve the lives of these individuals who have been marginalized socially, economically, and politically.”

United We Dream
The Largest National Immigrant Youth-Led Organization
Recipient of the 2016 Phillip Burton Advocacy Award

United We Dream has worked across the nation to build the leadership of undocumented immigrant youth in the fight for fair and just immigration reform. Its Deportation Defense Program is one of the largest national campaigns to help stop deportations in individual cases by connecting, training, and empowering local communities to defend themselves against deportations. We proudly recognize UWD’s contributions to fighting for immigrant rights with the 2016 Phillip Burton Advocacy Award.

“One the biggest challenges that we’re facing in immigrant communities in this country is that the very act of moving and migrating for reasons of love, or taking care of your family or fleeing violence—that very act is a crime. And we will not stop until that act is no longer a crime, and we fully humanize and decriminalize the immigrant community.”

ILRC Publications

In 1984, ILRC published its first manual. Since then, ILRC has been producing essential, practical publications for legal practitioners. All publications are geared toward helping practitioners who represent clients in immigrant communities. ILRC manuals are unique because they include clearly worded explanations, samples, charts, and other relevant examples.

A Guide for Immigration Advocates is a practical and essential tool for beginning immigration attorneys, paralegals, BIA accredited representatives, and nonprofit organizations. It provides a comprehensive and detailed overview of the law that is both practical and easy to use.

More than a compilation of immigration law topic articles, this publication is a how-to manual containing clearly worded explanations of each subject and includes sample applications, charts, and more. Each unit includes information or other resources that are critical to your library, Internet research, systems for identifying the potential remedies in a case, and how to manage a case load.

The U Visa: Obtaining Status for Immigrant Victims of Crime, 5th Edition

The U Visa: Obtaining Status for Immigrant Victims of Crime will guide you through the entire process of handling an immigration case for a U visa applicant. In addition to providing a thorough explanation of the requirements and application processes, this publication includes numerous practice pointers and sample materials to help you handle your client’s case. These samples and practice pointers are real time-savers and enable you to minimize your research time.

ILRC in the News

ILRC’s work has been highlighted in a variety of news outlets since the start of the year.

- ILRC Executive Director Eric Cohen penned an op-ed on the continued need for naturalization in Fox News Latino.
- The Hill ran an op-ed jointly written by ILRC Staff Attorney Grisel Ruiz and Christina Fialho, Co-Executive Director of Community Initiatives for Visiting Immigrants in Confinement (CIVIC), on improving conditions for immigrants in California detention facilities through hopeful passage of the Dignity Not Detention Act, which both organizations cosponsor (see page 6 of this newsletter for the full article).
- ILRC Managing Policy Attorney Jose was quoted when Vox.com ran an in-depth piece on a pair of immigration bills that were passed in 1996—bills that have had severe and unjust consequences in the realm of immigration enforcement.
- The Chicago Tribune quoted our staff attorneys Lena Graber and Mark Silverman on two separate occasions regarding sanctuary and detention policies.

ILRC Ambassador & Actress Diane Guerrero Publishes Book on the Reality of Family Separation Due to Deportation

ILRC Ambassador and “Orange Is the New Black” actress Diane Guerrero recently released In the Country We Love, a poignant memoir on her family’s experience of being caught in the crosshairs of our broken immigration system. In the book, Diane recalls the story of meeting ILRC Staff Attorney Grisel Ruiz who encouraged her to share her experience publicly and to let other families know that they are not alone.

With ILRC’s help, Diane’s Los Angeles Times op-ed went viral. In the book she notes, “I’d been itching to get involved, to do something to help immigrant families with nowhere to turn. I loved the fact that Grisel and the ILRC were educating people about their legal options.”

We’re proud of Diane Guerrero for using her platform to advance a message of inclusiveness, opportunity, and dignity for all immigrants.
