MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2	I. INTRODUCTION
3	Pursuant to California Penal Code § 1473.7, Defendant
4	respectfully moves this Court to vacate his 2012 conviction by plea nolo
5	contendore in Case No. for Possession for Sale in violation of Health & Safety Code §
6	11378.
7	is citizen of and a longtime legal permanent resident of the United 8	States. He was brought to United States as a minor, went to high school in 9	part of a large, tight knit family living in the United States. In 2011, was arrested and 10	charged with violations of Health & Safety Code §§ 11378 and 11359. It was 11	drug case and the District Attorney's office offered a plea to a violation of Health and Safety Code §
12	11378 with probation and credit for one day in jail. 's criminal defense attorney at the 13	time,concerned only with the direct punishment his client would 14	receive—urged to accept the plea. But while the plea deal offered by the District
15	Attorney was favorable in terms of traditional criminal punishment, it was disasterous from an 16	immigration law perspective. Of the severe
17	immigration consequences that his plea to a violation of Health & Safety Code § 11378 would carry.
18	Nor did he take any steps to defend against the immigration consequences associated with such a
19	conviction.
20	's conduct was inexcusable coming two years after the Supreme Court's
21	decision in Padilla v. Kentucky (2010) 559 U.S. 356 [130 S.Ct. 1473], and a long line of California
22	court cases establishing a Sixth Amendment duty on the part of defense counsel to advise of and
23	defend against the immigration consequences of a criminal conviction. His failures were especially 24	unfortunate since the District Attorney's office had a Collateral Consequences Policy in place at the
25	time and would have likely agreed to an alternative plea deal that would avoided some of the worst
26	immigration consequences had attempted to negotiate one. Had been 27	appropriately advised about the immigration consequences of a Health & Safety Code § 11378
28	conviction in his case, given how much was at stake, he would have never accepted the plea and

1	the apartment based on an anonymous tip . (Id.
$\begin{bmatrix} 1 \\ 2 \end{bmatrix}$	¶ 9; see also /11 Hearing Tr., Ex. F to Lai Decl., at 11:3-17). The LAPD asked
3	go to the police station. (Decl. ¶ 9).
4	At the time, was providing landscaping services to a man named , who
5	referred to criminal defense attorney (Id. ¶ 10).
6	and met in parking lot where provided a copy of the search
7	warrant to retained to represent him. (Id.).
8	then turned himself in to the authorities. (Id. \P 11). He was charged with Possession for
9	Sale in violation of Health & Safety Code § 11378 and Possession for Sale in violation of Health &
10	Safety Code § 11359. (Felony Complaint and Information, Ex. G to Lai Decl.).
11	's attorney-client relationship lasted about two years from 12	2011 to 2013. (Decl. ¶ 10). was eventually disbarred from practicing law in 13	California for misappropriating client funds. (State Bar Court Decision and Order
14	Supreme Court of California Order , Ex. H to Lai Decl.). ^{2,3} At no time while 15	's case was pending did was a U.S. citizen or what his 16	immigration status was. $(Id. \P 16)$. ⁴ They never met in a formal setting to discuss the case. $(Id. \P 12)$.
17	Their conversations took place in a parking lot, and on the way to, or at, the courthouse just before
18	scheduled court appearances. (Id.). did not get the impression that 19	had been disciplined on two prior occasions as well for failing to respond to reasonable
20	inquiries of a client and for failing to refund unearned fees. (Id. at 3-4). The incident for which he was disbarred occurred in the summer of 2011, just before began working on the 21	's case. (Notice of Disciplinary Charges, Ex. H to Lai Decl., at 2-3). The State Bar of California opened its investigation four days after was sentenced, on 2012.
22	(Id.). Undersigned counsel have made several attempts to contact in connection with this area by mail and amail but have not been suggestful (I ai Deal ¶ 10).
23	case by mail and email, but have not been successful. (Lai Decl. ¶ 10). Although did not inquire of security is reason to believe that was not a citizen. In connection with 24	a subsequent arrest for possession of controlled substance in violation of Health & Safety Code § 11377(A) in 2012, called from jail. (Id. ¶ 17).
25	told him that if he remained in jail for 30 days or more he could face "immigration consequences." (Id.) This information was a misrepresentation of immigration law, and
26	never explained to why he would face immigration consequences or what those consequences might be. (Id. ¶ 18). But the statement suggested that 27	from that was from guessed that was not a citizen from his appearance and accent, or found out about his citizenship or immigration status some other way.
28	(Id. ¶ 19).

	preparing his case for a trial or was negotiating possible plea deals with the District Attorney's office.
1
2	(Id.). Finally, on 2012, one year after the search of the apartment, and
3	appeared at the Los Angeles County Superior Court for a scheduled hearing. (Id. ¶ 13).
4	After speaking with the prosecutor and the judge, informed that he had
5	been offered a deal to plea no contest to Possession for Sale in violation of Health & Safety Code §
6	11378 with three years probation and credit for one day and no additional time in jail. (Id. ¶ 13). At no
7	time prior to 2012 did inform of any other plea offers. (Id. ¶
8	that if he did not accept the plea, he would be facing a long
9	sentence exposure at trial and would have to pay significant additional attorney's fees. (Id. ¶ 13).
10	While had explained to the custody aspects of his plea deal, he 11	did not mention anything about the severe immigration consequences associated with the plea. (Id. ¶¶
12	13, 16). For example, he did not inform that a conviction under Health & Safety Code
13	§ 11378 would lead to virtually certain deportation from the United States, disqualification from major
14	forms of immigration relief, separation from his children and family, and a permanent bar on return.
15	did receive an advisal about immigration consequences from 16	the Court during his plea colloquy, (Transcript of /12 Plea Colloquy [hereinafter " /12 Plea
17	Tr."], Ex. I to Lai Decl., at 4:11-13), but he took the advisal to be a general warning that the Court had 18	to give everyone. (Decl. ¶ 15). He did not understand it to have applied to him as a legal 19	permanent resident who was in the United States legally and had failed to tell him
20	otherwise. (Id. ¶¶ 15-16).
21	At the time, 's greatest worry was being away from his children (who were two-22	and-a-half and eight months old at the time) and his family. (Decl. ¶ 24). It was his first 23	experience with the court system and he trusted (Id. ¶ 13). Thus, relying on 24	's recommendation, accepted the plea to Possession for Sale in violation of 25	Health & Safety Code § 11378. (Id.).
26	C. Subsequent Immigration Proceedings
27	was not immediately taken into federal custody. However, he was eventually 28	transferred to ICE custody after serving a sentence for possession of controlled substance in violation of

1	Health & Safety Code § 11377(A) in 2014. (Id. ¶¶ 20-22). He had been scheduled to be released in 2	connection with that case in of that year, but when he asked jail officials about the
3	anticipated date of his release, he was told he had an immigration hold and would not be going home.
4	(Id. ¶ 21). This was the first time learned that he was facing very serious immigration
5	consequences. (Id.)
6	On 2014, federal authorities initiated removal proceedings
7	. (DHS Notice to Appear, Ex. A to Lai Decl.) They charged him as deportable on grounds
8	that he had committed, inter alia, a "drug trafficking" aggravated felony offense. (Id. at 3; see also 9	Decl. ¶ 10). He is being detained pending his removal proceedings at the 10	Detention Facility. (Decl. ¶ 22). He has spent nearly 18 months in immigration detention to 11	date. (Id.) His next immigration court hearing is on 2017. (Lai Decl. ¶ 12).
12	faces deportation to a country he has not stepped foot in for 17 years, a country
13	he and his family fled because of persecution and where he has no more ties. (Decl. ¶¶ 2-5, 14	Decl. ¶ 10). Unless his conviction is vacated, he will likely lose his residency status and be 15	barred from becoming a citizen or ever returning to the United States again. (Decl. ¶¶ 10, 16).
16	In swords, his "life will be destroyed." (Decl. ¶ 25).
17	III. ARGUMENT
18	The right to counsel, secured by the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S.
19	Constitution and article I, section 15 of the California Constitution, includes the guarantee that the 20	defendant will receive effective representation. People v. Soriano (1984) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1470,
21	1478 [240 Cal.Rptr. 328] "The severity of deportation—'the equivalent of banishment or exile'—
22	underscores how critical it is for counsel to inform her noncitizen client that he faces a risk of 23	deportation." Padilla , 559 U.S. at 374-75 (internal citation omitted).
24	Success on ineffective assistance of counsel claim ("IAC") requires showing that (1)
25	defendant's legal counsel's performance was deficient, and that (2) a defendant's defense was 26	prejudiced by counsel's deficient performance. Strickland v. Washington (1984) 466 U.S. 668, 686
27	[104 S.Ct. 2052]. Whether counsel's performance is constitutionally deficient "is necessarily linked
28	to the practice and expectations of the legal community: '[t]he proper measure of attorney

Advisory: Duty of Criminal Defense Counsel to Advise Clients of Immigration CONSEQUENCES (May 12, 2010), available at https://defendingimmigrants.org/trainings ; and IMMIGRATION CONSEQUENCES OF DRUG OFFENSES (Jan 31, 2012), available at https://www.nacdl.org/ResourceCenter.aspx?id=21195. Since 2002, the website of the Defending Immigrants Partnership (DIP) has provided criminal defense attorneys with free online resources on how to understand and fulfill their duty to immigrant clients. See, e.g., A Defending Immigrants Partnership Practice Advisory, http://immdefense.org/wp-content/uploads/2012/01/Padilla_Practice_Advisory_011712FINAL.pdf (2010) (providing, in Appendix A, a summary checklist of immigration consequences of crimes, and, in Appendix B, national, regional, and state-specific resources "to assist defense lawyers in complying with their ethical duties to investigate and give correct advise on the immigration consequences of criminal convictions"). Furthermore, the Immigrant Legal Resource Center (ILRC) based in San Francisco, CA, has for many years put out a chart for criminal defense attorneys of the immigration consequences of most California offenses, including violations of Health & Safety Code § 11378. See https://www.ilrc.org/crimes. Finally, the California Continuing Education of the Bar book on CALIFORNIA CRIMINAL LAW PROCEDURE AND PRACTICE in 2012 contained an entire chapter on "Representing the Noncitizen Criminal Defendant," including a discussion about the immigration consequences of drug offenses. ("2012 CEB Criminal Law Book," Ex. J to Lai Decl., § 52). If did not want to consult these sources himself, he could have made a quick phone call to any criminal defense or immigration attorney with experience in these matters to discover the immigration consequences of Splea. Splea. Decl. ¶ 12); see also Cal. R. Prof.
Conduct 3-110 (providing, under the section titled "Failing to Act Comptently," that any member of the bar who does not have sufficient learning and skill when legal service is undertaken may "associat[e] with or professionally consult[] another lawyer reasonably believed to be competent").
Instead of doing any of the above, it appears that "did not make it [his] business to discover" what impact a plea to Health & Safety Code § 11378 would have on
's immigration status. Soriano , 194 Cal. App. 3d at 1480. As a result,

1	deprived of this critical information when deciding whether or not to accept the plea offer made by
2	the proseuction. Indeed, did not discuss immigration consequences with 3	at all. (Decl. \P 16). was misled into believing that the 4	relevant considerations were limited to the the custody aspects of proposed plea, which were 5	relatively favorable, and the expense of going to trial. (Id. ¶ 13). Relying on his lawyer's
6	recommendation, therefore took the plea. (Id.).
7	Under such circumstances, it is "not [] hard to find deficiency." Padilla, 559 U.S. at 368.
8	The Court should determine that so failure to investigate and advise of 9	the devastating immigration consequences of his plea fell below the standards for professional 10	conduct and "clearly satisfies the first prong of the Strickland analysis." Id. at 371 (quoting Hill v .
11	Lockhart (1985) 474 U.S. 52, 62 [106 S.Ct. 366]).
12	2. Failed to Defend Against the Immigration Consequences by 13	Seeking a Less Harmful Alternative Plea
14	The immigration consequences is facing today could have been avoided had 15	simply attempted to seek an alternative plea disposition that would be less harmful to 16	's immigration status. But just as failed in his duty to investigate and 17	advise his client of the specific immigration consequences of the District Attorney's plea offer, failed in this latter duty as well.
18 19	At the time of splea, California law required defense attorneys to look into 20	how the deportation consequence associated with a certain criminal conviction might be mitigated, 20	for example, by pursuing a judicial recommendation against deportation (or "RAD," before that 22	mechanism was repealed) or by pleading to an alternative offense. See People v. Barocio (1989) 216
23	Cal. App. 3d 99, 108-09 [264 Cal.Rptr. 573]; Bautista , 115 Cal.App.4th at 237-40. The reason for this
24	is simple. To make an informed decision about whether or not to accept a plea, a defendant must 25	know about—and be able to meaningfully choose between—all the different alternatives. Bautista ,
26	115 Cal.App.4th at 240. The Supreme Court's decision in Padilla endorsed this role of defense 27	counsel when it remarked that "[c]ounsel who possess the most rudimentary understanding of the deportation consequences of a particular criminal offense may be able to plea bargain creatively with 28

Penal Code § 32. (Id. \P 20). This likely would have saved from the possibility of Decl. ¶¶ 9, 12-14 (referring to the Supreme Court's decision in Padilla where it stated that "preserving the client's right to remain in the United States may be more important to the client than any potential jail sentence," 559 U.S. at 368, and concluding that standards for reasonable assistance of counsel).

B. Defense Counsel's Deficient Performance Prejudiced 's Case

A defendant may show that he was prejudiced by his defense attorney's failure to investigate and advise him of the immigration consequences of his plea by establishing that, had he understood the consequences, "a decision to reject the plea bargain would have been rational under the circumstances." Padilla, 559 U.S. at 372; see also Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687-88. Under California law, a defendant may establish prejudice in the plea context by demonstrating that "it is reasonably probable he would not have pleaded guilty if properly advised." People v. Martinez (2013) 57 Cal.4th 555, 562 [160 Cal.Rptr.3d 67] (internal citation omitted). A defendant need not establish that he "would have achieved a more favorable outcome" had he decided not to plea guilty. Id. at 559. Rather, the focus of the inquiry is on "what the defendant would have done." Id. at 559, 564. Additionally, there is no requirement to show that the defendant would "have insisted [instead] on going to trial." Id. at 566-67. In the case where there is evidence that would have caused the defendant to "expect or hope a different bargain would or could have been negotiated," the defendant can establish prejudice if he can show he would have rejected the plea offer in the hope that he "might thereby negotiate a different bargain, or failing in that, go to trial." Id. at 567.

In this case, there is little question that was prejudiced by deficient performance. If had taken the time to investigate and explain the severe immigration consequences of a plea to Health and Safety Code § 11378 and the available alternatives to he would have learned that as a longtime legal resident with deep roots in the United States—would have prioritized remaining in this country. As the court recognized in Martinez, a defendant's decision to "accept or reject a plea bargain can be profoundly influenced by the knowledge, or lack of knowledge, that a conviction in accordance with the plea will have immigration consequences." Id. at 564. If a defendant asserts he "would not have entered into the plea bargain if properly advised," then he must provide either a declaration or testimony to this responsibility to research the immigration consequences in the defendant's specific case and relay what he had found to the defendant. See supra Pt. III.A.1. See also Resendiz, 25 Cal.4th at 246 (explaining that defense counsel has an obligation to "assist the defendant," after conducting a reasonable investigation, and "owes the client a duty of loyalty," whereas the court does not); Soriano, 194 Cal.App.3d at 1479 (noting that "a defendant may reasonably expect that before counsel undertakes to act at all he will make a rational and informed decision on strategy and tactics founded on adequate investigation and preparation").

Instead of coming from his attorney, at a stage in the plea bargaining process when he could have used the information, the warning came only after had decided to plea guilty. He had no reference point for the comments made by the judge, and the warning was effectively a post-hoc formality for a bargain that had already been struck. The § 1016.5 warning was also immediately followed by the question: "Has anyone made any threats or promises to get you to plead guilty?" to which answered "No[.]" (Id. at 4:14-16). therefore never responded to the § 1016.5 advisal, nor did the judge did not inquire into whether he had discussed immigration consequences with his defense attorney or wanted additional time to do so.

The California Legislature did not intend, with § 1016.5, to replace the role of a defense attorney. Resendiz, 25 Cal.4th at 242 ("Nothing . . . suggests that the drafters of section 1016.5 intended either to narrow defendants' relationships with their attorneys or to shield incompetent legal advisers."). In fact, "[b]oth commentary and statute are concerned with the self-evident proposition that a defendant's in-court responses to rights advisement should not be made 'off-the-cuff.' Instead, they should reflect informed decisions he has reached after meaningful consultation with his attorney." Soriano, 194 Cal.App.3d at 1481 (emphasis added). "[T]hat a defendant may have received [a] valid section 1016.5 advisement[] from the court does not entail that he has received effective assistance of counsel in evaluating or responding to such advisements." Resendiz, 25 Cal.4th at 241.

Moreover, as discussed in supra Pt. III.A.2, had a duty not only to investigate and advise his client about the immigration consequences of his plea, but to explore alternative plea dispositions that might have mitigated those consequences, and communicated those to

. § 1016.5 does not touch on this important role of defense counsel at all. It certainly cannot mitigate or cure any prejudice resulting from strain strains and strains are strains.

Perhaps for these reasons, California courts have considered immigrants' claims of ineffective assistance of counsel claims even where they were provided with the required § 1016.5 warning. See, e.g., Resendiz, 25 Cal. App. 3d 1470; Soriano, 194 Cal. App. 3d 1470 (granting habeas petition for ineffective assistance of counsel despite adequate § 1016.5 warning); Bautista, 115 Cal. App. 229 (granting evidentiary hearing after finding ineffective assistance due to counsel in the absence of any allegation that court had failed to provide § 1016.5 warning). See also Padilla, 559 U.S. 356 (granting remand based on ineffective assistance of counsel despite noting that Kentucky courts provided notice of possible immigration consequences on its standard plea form). The Second District Court of Appeal has affirmed that "a defendant can pursue a claim for relief for ineffective assistance of counsel . . . notwithstanding that the trial court had properly advised the defendant under section 1016.5." People v. Aguilar (2014) 227 Cal.App.4th 60, 72 [173 Cal.Rptr.3d 473].

Decisions from other states serve as further persuasive authority on this issue. For example, the Supreme Court of Washington, sitting en banc, rejected the notion that a warning about immigration consequences in a guilty plea statement (as required by state statute) could negate defense counsel's ineffective assistance. State v. Sandoval (Wash. 2011) 249 P.3d 1015, 1020-21 (rather, plea form warnings underscored "how critical it is for counsel to inform her noncitizen client that he faces a risk of deportation") (quoting Padilla, 559 U.S. at 373-74) (emphasis in original). See also People v. Kazadi (Colo. App. 2011) 284 P.3d 70, 71–72, 74–75, aff'd, 2012 CO 73 [291 P.3d 16] (holding that plea form advisal was inadequate to cure prejudice resulting from criminal defense counsel's failure to give specific advice about immigration consequences).

To be clear, the issue is not whether so please and so please as a please of counsel under the Due Process Clause. See Resendiz, 25 Cal.4th at 243-44. The issue is whether received ineffective assistance of counsel under his Sixth Amendment rights. Id. The Supreme Court has, as Resendiz recognized, "never equated these two sets of obligations." Id. at 442. In sum, the Court has full authority to grant services as $ 1016.5 warning.

1	IV. CONCLUSION
2	has established, by a preponderance of the evidence, that his criminal defense
3	attorney provided ineffective assistar	nce of counsel damaging his ability to meaningfully understand
4	and defend against the immigration consequences of his plea. Pursuant to P.C. § 1473.7, the Court
5	should grant the motion to vacate his	2012 conviction for Possession for Sale in violation of 6	Health & Safety Code § 11378.
